six members, or just a quorum, in the House, it will be seen that no business could be touched if one member refused to vote. Knowing this, and evidently wishing to have the report of the committee adopted at once, the white leader referred to moved that those who refused to vote be called before the bar of the House for contempt. Upon this the wildest disorder ensued. Twenty men started to their feet and commenced speaking at the same moment. Above the general con-fusion could be heard shouts of "You lie, you nigger, you." "Dat's not parliamentary, sah." "You's a wiolatin' of the Constitution, sah." The last remark was made by a young and handsome mulatto. He had no sooner uttered it than a very black man turned upon him and exclaimed with an air of the utmost contempt, "What you knows about the Constitution, you yellow moke, you? You pusson of unsure parentage, you shut your fool mouf." This caused a loud laugh among the negro spectators, and was reeted with such exclamations as "Golly, but dat nig is some"; "He's the man for talkin'"; "You bet," and "To be sure, honey."

A SPECIMEN OF NEGRO ORATORY.

After this scene had continued for nearly half an hour, Mr. Hahn, the Speaker of the House, ascended the platform and motioned and by dint of hard shouting succeeded in the evidence so far. restoring some degree of order. Then he House for contempt in having refused to vote upon a report of the Committee on Elections, and for thus breaking the quorom of the House. Upon this, Demas, representative from St. John's parish, jumped to his feet, and was recognized by the Chair. He is one of the blackest negroes in the State, and has great influence with his own people. For this reason, or because his colleagues were too tired to create further disturbances, he was listened to with some attention. For a moment after he had been accorded the floor he stood without speaking a word, gazing upon his associates with an assumption of dignity that was truly laughable. He is a short, stout man, with a very large head, thick lips, and glaring eyes. As I have already stated, he is very black. His immense head was closely shaved, and his face smooth. He was on the inside. dressed with a degree of taste not to be looked for in such an assemblage. His coat and pantaloons were of fine black broadcloth. He wore a well-washed white vest, spotless linen, and a broad, black cravat. His monster hands were covered with a pair of new lavender-colored kid gloves. With that keen appreciation of dramatic situations which is one of the leading characteristics of the negroes of the southern States he continued to stand in his place, making no motion, and not opening his mouth. One of his hands rested upon the back of his chair, and the other he had thrust into the bosom of his vest. Many of the black spectators looked upon him with evident admiration, and as be stood the confusion on the floor of the House ceased entirely. Then he spoke substantially as follows: "Missa Speaker and other gemmen of dis here House,-You have just heard a motion made to call four lawful representatives of the people befo' the bar to answer for contempt dat they would not vote for a measure which guard of State policemen. I had they knowed was wrong. One of them in passing through the members was me, Demas, who reprewhite and black, of the good Parish of St. John the Baptist. Dis gemman is a-goin' to do, wid no reference to previous color, race, or condition, as we is told to do by the Constitution and the laws." Here the speaker was interrupted by loud applause from the negroes and laughter from the white men present. Continuing, be said: 'An attempt have been made here to-day to stop debatin' and interfer' wid the rights of emmen by preventin' of free discussion. Dis I's opposed to. What does we come here for? What for but to talk, advise together, and discussion questions for the good of the people?" "Dat's so, sure 'nough," cried several of the members, and Demas continued: "Dat bein' so, I's gowin to have my right of debate, and ain't gowin to vote on no question whar the discussion is stopped.

'sides that, I's told dat the gemmen as is

I feel dat way, gemmen, an I ain't gowin to won't vote on dis here question, so sure as my name am Demas, from the parish of St. John the Baptist."

At the close of this speech Mr. Demas sat down amid loud applause and some laughter. He had no sooner resigned the floor than nearly every member in the House jumped to his feet and demanded recognition. A wild scene of confusion again ensued. Twenty different motions were put. and none of them acted upon. The expressions "liar" and "nigger" were frequently used, and at one moment it seemed as if the meeting would break up in a fight. Frequent calls were made for the Sergeant-at-Arms, but that officer was nowhere to be found. At length comparative quiet was restored, and Speaker Hahn, who knows out his term in jail. The judgment of the less of parliamentary law than many New England school-boys, having decided that a motion to take a recess to a certain time was not debatable, the floor was given to Yorke, a white man, who tendered his resignation to Governor Kellogg through request the doorkeeper allowed me to the Speaker. In doing so he said that he did not wish to be a member of any body which could not maintain its own dignity and whose presiding officer was unable to preserve order. He then handed the Speaker small space is set apart for visitors, his written resignation, and attempted to pass out of the hall. Without his presence the quorum would be broken, and the Speaker ordered the Sergeant-at-Arms not to allow him pass. He was prevented from leaving the chamber. He had no sooner returned to his seat, however, than he was accused on all sides of having sold out to the Democrats, who are, of course, most anxious to break the quorum of the so-called Kellogg Legislature. These accusations were followed by great noise and confusion, and three other members of the House tendered their resignations to the Speaker. He pad no attention to them, however. At this juncture Hahn was seen to whisper to one of the messengers, who at once passed out o: the chamber and pushed his way through the crowd in the direction of the Governor's office. He soon returned, followed by Governor Kellogg, who came bareheaded and greatly excited. Proceeding to the Speaker's desk the Governor was informed of what had transpired, and of the threatened resignation of members. He then returned to the floor of the House, and taking Demas, Yorke, and the others, into a corner, tried to convince them that they were nurt-

THE PLATT-GOODE CONTEST .-- The taking of depositions for the contestants in the case of James H. Platt, Jr., vs. John Goode, Jr. involving the title of the latter to the seat in the Forty-fourth Congress for the Norfolk district, was commenced by Judge Hughes on Saturday morning. As a matter of official tive office, in the capitol building, and there took the depositions of Governor Kemper, who, by virtue of his office, was president of the State Board of Canvassers which awarded the certificate of election to Mr. Goode. General Henry A. Wise, Captain John Lyon, and Senator Edgar Allan appeared as counsel for Mr. Platt, and Colonel W. W. Gordon for Mr. Goode, who was there in person. The examination of Governor Kemper related chiefly to the throwing out of the informal and invalid returns from Prince George county. The questions were written out by a clerk and submitted to the Governor, and he subscribed his answers. The Governor's examination having been concluded, the further taking of depositions was postponed until 7 o'clock Saturday night, when Hop. John Goode was examined at the United States court-room. At 10 o'clock further proceedings were deferred until 9 the young man with the red neck-tie to find o'clock this morning. Very little that is new some other seat. > THE LATE FIRE. - The loss by the fire on Saturday morning, of which mention has already been made in the Dispatch, was about $300. One of the stables partly burned was owned by a colored man named Cheatthe time. When the firemen went in to extinguish the flumes the horse was standing quietly in his stall with several pieces of the burning stable resting upon his back and rump. Mr. Wirt Roberts's stable also took fire, but the dogs which were kept in the stable were so ferocious that the firemen could scarcely effect an entrance. Indeed, for a long time they were prevented from doing anything towards putting out the fire
